

Utilize Improvisational Acting Techniques to Interview and Network Like a Pro

Wednesday, October 17, 2012

4 New York Plaza, 3rd Floor

11:00 AM – 1:00 PM EDT

Think faster and better on your feet by learning and practicing improvisational techniques that are used by professional actors.

Applying improv “rules of thumb,” such as “yes...and,” “enter and exit with purpose,” and “make others look good” will enable you to move dialogues forward, establish connection, build interest, and generate positive impressions.

We invite you to share your “real-life” interviewing and networking experiences during the workshop as a basis for creating meaningful practice scenarios for these techniques.

Facilitators

Steven Davis has coached and placed thousands of IT professionals in diverse positions through his roles as Managing Director of the IT Practice in global staffing firms and as a Counselor with Career Services. He has staffed placement organizations and has been entrusted with many exclusive job search agreements from hiring managers, as a result of his success in matching candidates with opportunities of best fit.

Hemda Mizrahi developed IT Career Pathways, and has facilitated programs and provided individual counseling to IT professionals at Career Services since 2000. She has collaborated with employment professionals and clients in designing strategies and resources that have supported countless successful landings and transitions both within and out of IT.
